

The Lexington Medical Society Foundation is a non-profit, charitable 401-c-3 corporation established in 1964 with funds left over from the mass polio immunization program carried out in our community.

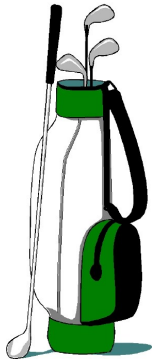

Mission

The purpose and principle thrust of the Lexington Medical Society foundation is to provide for and to promote improvement in health care for the community with reference to health services and health education in general. Specifically, the corporation views as its mission, the support, enhancements and/or stimulation of activities relative to a broadly based health related community effort. Priority focus is on the prevention of illness and the maintenance of health in order to reduce cost impact to individuals and to society, rather than direct support of the treatment of illness or the reimbursement of individual expense for personal health services or education.
